PRETTY IS A PRACTICE INITIATIVE

Growing Together

Crowning Around

A little paper, a little imagination and an entirely unreasonable amount of royal ceremony. Create your own crown, invent a title and prepare for a coronation nobody will soon forget.

1. The Crown Workshop

Gather Your Royal Supplies

- [ ] Plain paper plates
- [ ] Construction paper or cardboard
- [ ] Scissors and tape or glue
- [ ] Markers, crayons or colored pencils
- [ ] Optional: a treasure hunt for creative materials (see right!)

2. Name Your Nobility

Every crown deserves a title. Invent one for yourself or bestow one upon another member of the royal court.

Make Your Masterpiece

Choose a method—or try both!

Paper Plate Crown
Cut a starburst pattern into the center of a plate, leave the rim intact and fold the points up. Decorate.

Paper Strip Crown
Cut a long strip of paper or thin cardboard, add points or curves, decorate and fasten to fit.

3. The Coronation

- Announce the royal title with appropriate grandeur.
- Present the crown.
- Deliver a brief proclamation explaining why the title is richly deserved.

The Royal Supply Hunt

Before you buy anything, see what treasures you already have.

Something shiny
Aluminum foil, old gift bags, metallic wrapping paper

Something colorful
Magazine pages, tissue paper, fabric scraps, ribbons

Something unexpected
Old buttons, hair bows, barrettes, yarn, pom-poms

Something entirely your own
Drawings, handwritten words, paper shapes or homemade details

The Royal Challenge

Can you turn three ordinary objects into something magnificent?

The Royal Remix

Make a crown for someone else.

1. Draw names.
2. Create their crown.
3. Give them a title.
4. Write a short royal decree.
5. Hold the grand reveal.

A Few Royal Notes

- There's no correct way to make a crown. Elaborate or understated, elegant or completely outrageous—all are welcome.
- For younger participants, prepare the cardboard strips ahead of time or offer help with scissors.
- The only requirement? Everyone gets crowned.

The C's in Practice
